

New Study - American's LESS Comfortable with Gay Lifestyles

Hint: Conservatives Are Not to Blame

A recent survey put out by the LGBTQ organization, GLAAD shows surprising results. Americans, especially millennial's are less accepting of gay lifestyles than in previous years.

I have predicted this in previous writings. I stated that after the Supreme Court decision on gay marriage, the gay rights lobby was not going to give up all the political power they had accumulated during the equality struggle.

The gay activists looked for new causes and found "trans" and "wedding cakes."

When a story first hits the media, the public generally accepts the press accounts, even if it is inaccurate. But with time, the public learns "the rest of the story" and then changes their perception.

When the gay movement became: "Drag queens reading to kindergarten students" or "LGBTQ sexuality in elementary school," or when it became homophobic for a man to be upset because the girl he just went out with, had a penis. Mainstream America has enough.

When my 10-year-old granddaughter come home from school saying "she is bisexual." America says: "this is going too far."

When the media and gay organizations brand a pizza place that has never catered any kind of wedding into public enemy #1, because the daughter said that they would not cater a gay wedding, America says "they went too far"

When a cake artist is sued for refusing to create art for a gay wedding. America says it has gone too far."

Most gays support the far left agenda because they believe it is in their best interest. A closer look, shows that for many gays the leftist agenda is hurting their cause.

Under Donald Trump, gays have not lost any rights. But if they continue to embrace wacko liberalism they will hurt their own cause and all the progress they have made.
