

Reagan's Most Important Saying:

It is Republican silly season. Anyone who has a grievance against a GOP Congressperson or Senator announces that they will primary the RINO.

They immediately launch into a tirade of what this Republican did wrong. Such as: Not supporting Trump on January 6th or anything else they can think of.

Then they announce what their agenda will be when they get to DC and how they will be the voice of the true conservative movement.

Half the GOP activists will wildly applaud and sign up and help their campaign.

No one asks the only important question:

If you succeed in winning the primary, how do you keep the seat from flipping BLUE?

In a safe district, this is not a problem. Example? AOC won a low turnout primary and the district was strongly Democrat, so there was no question about who would win in November.

But in a purple district... This is the kiss of death.

The losing candidate will pledge unity, however, many of the activists will sit it out or worse, support the third-party or Democrat opponent.

Many activists launch a primary campaign believing that if they win the primary the national and state GOP will commit all the resources to keeping the seat in Republican hands. This can be a bad miscalculation.

Example: Republican primary challenger wins a low turnout primary, by turning out the anti-mask Republican base. There's a good chance the national party will consider the race a LOSER, because you locked up the anti-mask vote, however the Pro mask vote is a majority of the voters in the district.

The party decides you are "Dead Man Walking" and the support is less than zero.

If you cause the seat to flip you are keeping Nancy Pelosi in power. END OF STORY.

One final note, running for Congress is the major leagues. Similar to pitching for the Yankees or playing quarterback for the Cowboys.

You don't wake up one day and say "I'm running for Congress." You can, this is America, but it is the same as saying "Tomorrow I am pitching for the Yankees."

So what did Ronald Reagan say?
"Vote for the best Republican THAT CAN WIN!!"
