Still want socialized healthcare? More than 300 people reportedly died every week while waiting for treatment in British emergency rooms in 2025. Half a million patients waited more than 24 hours. Meanwhile, in Palm Beach County, many ER patients are seen within 10 minutes.

Kalshi is not news. People post Kalshi predictions is if they are polling data, but all they really represent is what some people are willing to bet on. If prediction markets were always right, Trump would have been president in 2020.

The DOJ has determined that the EEOC may be violating civil rights laws by mandating DEI-based hiring decisions.

As I told you last week, the supposed Trump-Netanyahu rift appears to have been a deception aimed at Iran.

Trump tells Israel not to strike back at Iran, but as soon as American helicopters are hit, military action follows. Welcome to the Middle East.

Now that Carmelo Anthony has been found guilty, the victim's parents and siblings should consider whether to pursue civil action against his parents for money raised through GoFundMe.

The U.S. Attorney's Office in Los Angeles is reportedly investigating voter registration irregularities, including a mission that logged 1,160 voter registrations despite having capacity for only 120 beds. Another report claims 7,600 voters are registered at addresses without overnight accommodations. If these allegations hold up in court, this could become a major story.

The Somali referee we did not allow into the country reportedly had ties to a terrorist organization.

For those screaming about Susan Collins, remember that she represents a purple-to-blue state. She has to vote against Trump often enough to demonstrate independence or she risks losing re-election. A Republican who occasionally breaks with the party is still preferable to a Democrat—provided they vote with the caucus on the major issues.

Why do some Lebanese want to "free Palestine"? So they can send Palestinians back to their own country. Many don't want them remaining in Lebanon.

I love the headline: "Popular Steakhouse to Close." If it were that popular, it probably wouldn't be closing.

Pepsi is beginning to operate self-driving trucks. Driving jobs will slowly—and then not so slowly—disappear. That is why it is important to get rid of illegal immigrants. The driving jobs are going to dry up.

More than 273 Americans have reportedly been shot since the Iran conflict began... in Chicago.

The Midwife of Auschwitz: During the Holocaust, Stanisława Leszczyńska was ordered to kill Jewish babies. She refused, saying that she brought life into the world, not death. For two years she worked with her bare hands in terrible conditions—no gloves, no sterilization, and little more than strips of cloth torn from her own clothing. She delivered approximately 2,000 babies. Most would not survive long under camp conditions, but she reportedly never lost a mother during childbirth. May her memory be a blessing.

Did you know that the midwife is the only profession blessed by God. The midwives, Shiphrah and Puah, refused Pharaoh's order to kill Hebrew baby boys. The Bible says that because they feared God, God "dealt well with the midwives" and "made them households" (families) as a blessing (Exodus 1:20–21).

I love the way Trump is bombing the hell out of Iran. He gave them all the time in the world. I guess they finally pushed him too far.

It's amazing how every Arab country once wanted to boycott Israel, yet many now line up to buy Israeli weapons.

I have an insurance conference in Salt Lake City. I'm going to try to finish this newsletter on Sunday so it can go out Tuesday, which means I may miss some last-minute developments that would normally make the column.

One of the weakest arguments against claims of Israeli genocide is simply saying, "Their population increased." While true, that argument rarely persuades critics. A better question is: if 2,000 women died in a war over a year, would that automatically constitute genocide? The answer is no. Intent and circumstances matter.

Carmelo Anthony's parents are wearing shirts that say, "Believe Carmelo." How can you believe him, when he didn't even testify?

Based on available reports, it appears that any Trump-Iran deal may not be a particularly strong one. I understand the political realities. He needs lower energy prices going into the midterms.

I may be disappointed, but I also recognize that if he emerges stronger after the midterms, he will have greater freedom of action. We'll see what happens.

The roach hated the ants so much that he voted for bug spray.

A federal judge has reportedly ruled that those attempting to stop the proposed White House UFC event lack standing.

Elon Musk may be worth over a trillion dollars on paper, but unless he can actually sell that stock, the number is largely theoretical. The moment a founder starts unloading massive amounts of stock, investors begin asking why and the price drops.

Are the people paying $500,000 for courtside seats at Knicks games Trump voters or not? I'd love to hear your thoughts.

It looks like the Iran deal may be signed on Sunday. As I said before, all Trump really needs to do is get through the midterms. After that, the political landscape changes.

I will remind you again: the issue voters will ultimately decide the midterms on may not even have happened yet.

"I just found out my son is a Trump supporter. What do I do?"

Response: Give him a free cell phone, free food, free medical care, free housing, and then give him 40% of your income. Soon he'll quit his job, move back to the couch, play video games all day, and take bong hits like a stereotypical Democrat.

Ahhhhh...The French..... Now that Iran is signing a deal for the Strait of Hormuz, the French are ready to patrol and help the United States in any way possible.
